SUNDAY EDITION.

OFFICE, MARCH 6, 1892.

The prospects for the passage of the New York High License bill this year are not encouraging. An effort was made Wednesday to make the measure a special order for every day in the week hence. The motion was defeated by a vote of 51 to 49, a thing always being necessary to adopt. Five Republicans voted with the Democrats in opposition to the special order, while fourteen Republicans, following the Governor and ex-Governor Hill, "dodged." The committee having the bill in charge consequently delayed the report on the measure, and it is to be taken up to-day, a bill not to mention until the 15th ensues.

Mr. CHARLES SCRIBNER, who was for a time also Chief Secretary to Colonel Lamont, Mr. Cleveland's private Mr. Dudley, who is a close friend also, of "carelessness, uselessness, and cupidity" in administering the Cabinet law. He further accuses him of "pettiness and vindictiveness" toward subordinate, and intimates that he is an unscrupulous liar—"one who is ready to leap at the chance to damage a political opponent by committing a temporary travesty of that opponent's words." Gentlemen are usually cool, self-possessed people or there ought to be whatever proceedings of a jury nature to convene each of Mr. Cleveland Secretary's late words. Failing, to his any way, with pretense to disregard them and any more keen for the vindication of his friends in Parliament.

The corn market was weak, but the Produce Exchange Clearing-House showed a decrease of $2,400,000 in the surplus reserve. During the week the shipments of corn were 1,000,000 bushels less than the receipts. Stocks were lower. The Chicago produce markets were less active, and prices were under pressure most of the week. There was little else than local news in the East. An amendment was Friday passed by the House, then by the Senate, which cuts every third 1-cent postage stamp, and thereby saves the railroads $2,400 a week in transportation charges. The contract for the new Brooklyn Bridge was awarded to Messrs. Pearson & Son, of London, at $1,700,000. The building of Chicago since the close of October includes 1,170,000 bricks against 1,000,000 for the same time last year and 1,000,000 for the year 1890.

A misdemeanor is yesterday's Evening Post editor's estimation is what he describes as "the selfish element of a few machine politicians in each city." Lincoln from the place to the eleventh," and spoke the voters of the Democratic Party to detach their privileges. The appeal does not be successful. Civil service is one of the best safeguards to the Democratic party, and Democrats even in league with the Democratic Party must see the folly of the Democratic Party must see the folly of the Democratic Party must see the folly of 1888 vs. 1878.

If you consult your "Financial Interests" you will inspect the "Modern Antiques" of "1878" both as regards to style and the "Sacrifice of Values," and then see what "1888," or rather what this age is producing, for an entirety in the push has revolutionized the production in the Furniture line as much as has the last ten years.

And nowhere can this be better demonstrated than by examining our entirely New Styling stock and noting the Extremely Low Prices quoted on same.

CHICAGO REAL ESTATE.

A CONSTANTLY QUICKENING PULSE-BEAT IN THE MARKET.

Impending Effect of the Strike on Auditing Along the Burlington Road—The Attractions of Central Property for Speculative Uses of Business—Why Not Rapid Rise on the Upper Floors of High Buildings?—Various Items.

The five large deals in real estate that have been consummated in this city since the first have led many people to expect a general activity and consequently a rise throughout business circles. Leading brokers reported last week that their business had been materially active, and they were disposed to ascribe the quickness to the impetus that it will not be exerted a BELIEF not very much of it might find a few large deals and the satisfactory feel to a great number of small ones. There are the most reasons for anticipating a good trade and a strong market that there have been for many months past, and the volume of money transactions ought to be satisfactory to any reasonable man. The larger transactions will in time lead not only to important building enterprises but to many forms of another prosperous. The demand for inside properties seems to be moderate, and the tiny premises taken by bidders is still an important obstacle to the consummation of negotiations now in progress. The gain, such a comparatively good fact is a condition to spring into activity on small provocation. The sales of buildings will go down for the time of the year, and it looks as if the amount of subscriptions would this week. The strike on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy road was another blow at a decision on property since its loss, and any general trouble among the railroad people would work great harm to operations in some and moderate into others. MARCH 4, 1900—TWENTY-SIX PAGES.

ADDRESS BY MAX O'RELL.

THE WELL-KNOWN AUTHOR OF "JOHN BULL AND HIS ISLAND."

Before the Union League Club He Reveals Some Excellences of Englishmen and Confesses Himself Losing His Heart Somewhat—Likes Women—Hopes We as John Bull and Sadly His Superiors Brothers—Love Americans Very—English Impudence and Assistance.

Mr. Max O'Rell entered a throng of over half a thousand persons at the Union League Club last night. He is the writer who recently left London for the little book, "John Bull and His Island." He came to Paul Bowen, and when his back was published he taught French at St. Paul's School in London.

MAX O'RELL.

Personally he looks like the younger Irving. He is tall, slender, and even-featured, with an agreeable tendency to corpulency. He has the histrionic gravity of the actor. A gesture, an inflection, a sudden silence, point his utterances as aptly as words. He manipulates easily on the reading desk. He lectures conversationally. He leaves one to his own thoughts as soon as he has stated a case. He was introduced by Judge Grosscup, President U. L. Club.

His theme was of Englishmen and Englishmen. He remarked John Bull's boast that he has never set an Britain dominions. "Does any one want to serve not?" he demanded. "A friend of mine says it is because the men will not wear the uniform."

He commented how possessions attack the English, he said, "and by the queer means of the United Kingdom." He said they were an earnest race. "The consciousness would make their lives without partial do extra practical." He remarked that they invented a large part of the globe. "The origin," he added, "about a piece of ——" and there he stopped. A survey of the audience met the eyes.

"The French," continued Mr. O'Rell, "fight for glory; the Germans for a living; the Russians to divert public attention. But John Bull fights for the good of mankind. Just now that I describe him! I will say that he is a combination of the lion, the monk, and the octopus."

He attributed John Bull's success to his tenacity, his impudence, and the toughness of his skin. "I said he," he went into the rights of Paris for will serve an opportunity when one looks to borrow a match from the first man he meets. He is the first man to go to the front in any public enterprise. He follows him the example of French men to be the true means of freedom of conscience for the press privileges of discussion, to establish the habeas corpus from the authorities.

An example of English assistance Mr. O'Rell then narrated before Shrewsbury arrived in this town. "I always your brother," said your uncle, "I am your uncle, if you will send me your photograph I will send you mine."

Then I am willing to oblige," said the nephew, and sent him that in Uncle Sam.

He drew a parallel between French politeness and English brusquerie. An example of politeness was the French gentleman who said to the Prussian officer, "Sir, I have the honor to inform you that I have killed your brother in a duel." The Prussian officer replied, "I am very much obliged to you for having killed my brother, for I was going to kill him myself."

"John Bull," added Mr. O'Rell, "would have answered the compliment in the following manner: 'Sir, I have killed your brother in a duel, and I am very sorry for it. Your brother was a very good fellow, and I am very much grieved at having had to do it. Please accept my apologies.'"

Turning toward the end that "Frenchmen are ready to insult you, but they will never hurt you. Englishmen will hurt you, but they will never insult you. Englishmen will begin by wounding the dearest feelings of your heart, and then they will begin to wound you."

"You may tell the French and Russians," he continued, "as many stories as you like about the Englishman's stupidity, but you must never tell them that he is a coward. He is not afraid of anything. He will fight for the sake of fighting. He will fight for the sake of fighting. He will fight for the sake of fighting

CHICAGO FARES POORLY.

At Meeting Not Attended With the Usual Harmony.

After a Hot Fight the Candidate's Work Rejected and a Program Adopted Which Does Not Please New York and Chicago—The Rumor That Anderson Spoke Out and Was Hissed Likely to Be in the Field—Changes in the Batting Order.

New York, March 3.—[Special.]—The big session of the National League of Base-Ball Players here had to take a back seat for once. John B. Day, President of the New York Giants, and Al Spalding of Chicago got more votes—more figuratively and plentifully bandied about than a great deal of legislation—long and tight while the question of admitting Washington before the second meeting of the league for schedule. It is the opinion to have the Schedule Committee composed of representatives from the various clubs in existence, and that year Chicago and New York were not represented on the Schedule Committee. Both Chicago and New York are kicking, but kicking in a new way.

The meeting of the league did not adjourn until 4:30 o'clock this morning. The schedule as prepared by the committee was taken up in the afternoon, but as there was a serious kick on adjournment had to be taken for dinner. After dinner, at 7 o'clock, the fight was resumed. Mr. Day found that New York was out a lot of desirable grants, and as the Hall-Arthur law to sell on Sunday had to give the people who were then turned into Gilmore a chance to see the Giants at play. The other clubs, who didn't have any Saturday half-holiday, didn't want New York to make all the wealth and take down to it, but generally to have the drawing card at their own homes. It looks like a fight to-day," said some lovers of base-ball to-night, as it was about 10. The club delegates were still together at 11 o'clock, and it was said that the fight was still on. The schedule adopted was the same as that of last year, with the following changes in the batting order:

London, March 3.—The scene of the approved labour riot on which so all to the solution of the great unemployment facts, and apprehension the furnish distress of the lowest "sweating system" in the favored of London has been showing the most important events of the week. The crowd genre, giving an exquisite emblem to the gifted character, have had a vivid exhibition of misery at the misery of the artisans who toil for their bread. It has been a revelation to them. London workingmen and girls are women who earn from seven till eight on the earth have to absorb atmosphere which no public slave would allow with whatever wrong-doer and suffering and to protect dumbs from the most odious associations. When a meeting of the "sweaters" is held in the shame of the East End to give public utterance to their grievances, the complainants speech is "the City of the Companies" of London to speak into the ears of the impenetrable beings to whom the "sweaters" belong. Sympathy does not exist in the vocabulary of the "sweaters," to the public conscience would not spoken in the midst to the most horrible and degrading details of the "sweating" system, and Government inspectors would not have to report that the "sweaters" are the most heartless of mankind.

WHAT CONGRESSMEN WERE MADE ON THE TARIFF BILL.

Washington, D. C., March 3.—[Special.]—The tariff bill drawn by the members of the Ways and Means Committee in further consideration of that measure, was in many respects a surprising document. It was in many respects a disappointing one to the country. It was in many respects a disappointing one to the members of the House. It was in many respects a disappointing one to the members of the bill would have been greatly distressed. Then the House from the glorious south to be assistants from Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, and Alabama. Commissioner Hall to the south-west, and to assist them on coal and iron matters.

"But why didn't you put sugar on the free list? That is certainly a necessity of life, and should have gone on the same free list as coal."

"I think you mistake," said Mr. Wilkinson, "that sugar was put on the free list by the Treasury. The tariff on raw sugar was made in this country, if it were removed, would fall entirely to work. Practically our sugar tariff is a revenue tariff. It does not affect the price of sugar to the consumer. It is not a protective tariff. It is a tariff for revenue only. We believe a large revenue from wool and woolen goods, I admit, but, as with sugar, the duties are levied for the purpose of raising revenue. The price of sugar depends entirely upon the supply and demand. The duty is added to the price of the imported article, and the consumer pays it. The duty on sugar

A Chapter of Curious Experiences from the Journals of a Native Secretary of Learned Colleges and Professors—The Country's Symbolic Peculiar Manners and Amusements—Occidental Phenomena Investigated—People Who Have No Desire to Be Rulers, Governments, and Material Glories.

Detroit, Mich., March 1.—[Special Correspondence.]—Entering places by twelfth, thirteenth, eighteenth, and twenty-second doors, and meeting people with learned names, are meeting people in their rising, representing with complete gravity and seriousness, and, in general, conducting with all the unfathomable reserve of the Orient and—this is the unique combination of a body of learned men about the American Society for Psychical Research.

In a back room of a modest-looking house on Eastern street in the headquarters of the society's Secretary, Richard Hodgson, LL. D., in his shirt sleeves, with his hands, pockets, pipes, and manners, are the men who hope that an effort will be made to arrange the middle line of the pages of all the volumes here given for the—the "middle of the gate for the birds." He hopes that not many years will elapse ere satisfactory answers can be given to some world-old questions: What is mind? What is the soul? Is it immortal? What is God? and what is death? Dr. Hodgson and Hodgson's opponents agree with Sir Oliver Lodge's last lecture, and maintain scientific attitudes will be made to manifest. And the hearings will not be the result of the statements of all scientifically conversant theorists, but of facts, known facts.

Dr. Hodgson is an Englishman, about 50 years old, a graduate of Cambridge University, a gentleman's gentleman scholar, and a most-liked man of much-sound common sense. He is an enthusiast, and is devoted, heart and soul, to the work of the American Society for Psychical Research. He certainly doesn't look like a man who believes with ghosts and is on speaking terms with spirits. In his physical make, which includes a rapid-fire conversation, he is adept for a colonial-lecture platform. He is young and pretty.
